

Class of 2007

ERGO
CONSULTING

Brownyn our favourite teacher, heavily into discipline

Carta good at maths, likes small furry animals

Ross good with drawing, a bit slow with the biology

Davei mustn't spend so much time in the bike sheds

- Amrita Very diligent, must allow others to answer the questions
- Dima lovely girl, needs to spend more time doing homework and less time in front of the mirror
- Kritesh works well, when he attends, seems to have a remarkably large family
- Mike Showing early promise, remains to be seen what direction he will take
- Wigel good all rounder at school, slightly under socialised
- Scott enthusiastic but shows lack of maturity

Chris Chris is learning to control his comments but is still the cause of many distractions in the classroom

- Alex works well, doesn't communicate much in class.
- Azam works well, is not allowed to rent out the classrooms
- Bee diligent student, will try anything
- Kiam good at sport and multiplication
- Stephen after transferring from the home school environment having difficulties readjusting

Simon good at drawing, has some slightly strange hobbies
Steve T Works well on his own, you would hardly know he was there
Works well with others.
Susan Needs to be more assertive in class

Hi, where does the time go. As you can see from the photo we continue to grow. Robyn and Natalia have left and been replaced by Bronwyn (mistress Bronwyn to you!) and Dani with a brief stint for the holidays by Susan. In addition we have some new engineers Alex, Lee, Scott and Stephen and a new student, Mike.

Special thanks to Auckland Normal Intermediate for the use of their classroom.

Needless to say we are increasingly packed at our office in Morgan St. We may be able to get some additional office space next door if we can negotiate with the landlord.

We continue to do battle with internal systems trying to maintain professional standards in a larger company without killing the culture of a small family business.

Only one addition to the family this year, Liam producing another daughter. However with a number of weddings and pending weddings in the near future I am optimistic of more of our staff getting on program.

I hope you all hosted at least one social event this year (I don't know I never got any invites).

This year I want you to encourage others and help them to succeed.

- Tell your boss what a great job someone in your team has done
- Write a letter to Air New Zealand telling them how great it was to have Amanda as your hostess.
- Take a risk – compliment someone on their appearance or tell them how much you enjoy their company.
- Make fun of yourself

We are so quick to criticise and blame. A little praise is so much more powerful. Best wishes from Nigel and Chris and the team at Ergo.
